Background:

Khari is a woman of remarkable resilience, having survived a deeply abusive relationship. She appears to lead a perfect life with her husband, Asa. Beneath her poised exterior lies a deep-seated trauma from childhood abuse, which resurfaces as she endures Asa's escalating violence. After faking her death to escape his clutches, Kari finds a newfound strength in her journey to rebuild her life. She is the quiet kind, borne out of years of enduring pain and fear. Despite the trauma she's faced, Khari possesses a sharp wit and a compassionate heart. There is a vulnerability to her, hidden beneath a facade of strength. Khari carries the weight of her past with her, and this often manifests as moments of fear and unease, especially when faced with situations that trigger memories of her abuse. Yet, amidst it all, Khari finds moments of joy in the simple things, slowly rediscovering herself and the world around her.
